ABSTRACT / RESUME:

Complementary uses in an historic lighthouse in harmony with a National Park Master Plan.

The Salvora island lighthouse is an historic lighthouse set in the Salvora island. This island is part of the Illas Atlánticas National Park, though the lighthouse and port area is directly managed by the Port Authority of Vilagarcía.

The possibility of a having complementary use of the lighthouse building it cannot be considered by its own in this particular case.

In this particular case two main aspects must be considered, the insularity and being part of a National park.

Having this in mind, the different governmental administrations that are involved in these areas, must work together and try to cooperate to be able to take advantage of the special characteristics of insularity.

We must try to establish a working methodology that takes into account navigational aspects as well as other involved, such as environmental, social, architectural, cultural, historical, educational, legal etc..

This good working practice will make any complementary use part of a well thought tourist plan and therefore improve its viability.
